How to put on a Separate Yukata

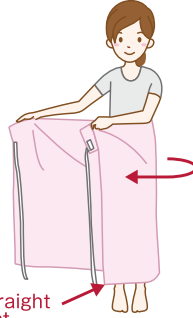

01

1. Decide the skirt length

Open up the skirt and hold it like the picture with the belt loop side on your left hand. Pull the hem of the cloth up to your ankle level.

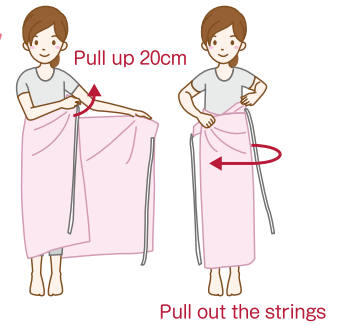

02

2. Decide the skirt width

Bring the left edge of the cloth to the right side, and wrap the highest position of your right waist. Align the left overlap with your right hipbone, and slightly pull the right side of the cloth, so no creases are left around the hip.

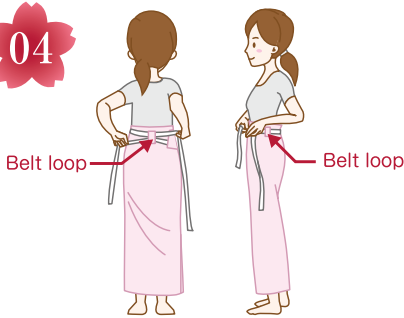

03

3. Wrap the skirt around

Open the left side, ensuring to keep the original width set in step 2. Raise the hem of the right cloth about 20cm, and draw to the left side. Layer the left cloth over it, pulling the strings on both sides outside.

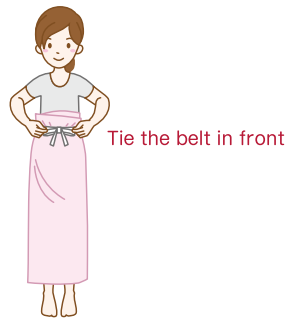

04

4. Cross the belt

Keeping the skirt width and length, cross the belt around your back. At that time, put the string through the belt loop at back and both sides.

05

5. Tie the belt

Remove wrinkles and adjust its shape. Tie the belt in front, and now the skirt is finished.

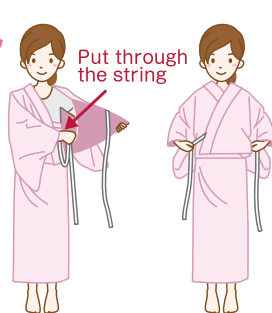

06

6. Put on the outer wear

Put on the outer wear, and match the seams on right and left collars at the same level. Make sure the center back seam of the yukata aligns with your spine.

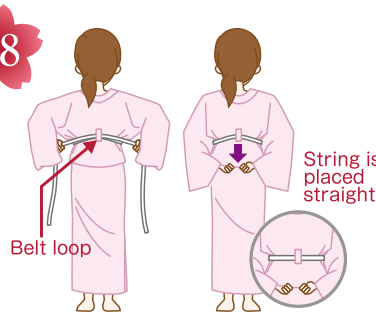

07

7. Adjust the outer wear

Put through the right string into the opening below the left sleeve, and layer the left cloth over it.

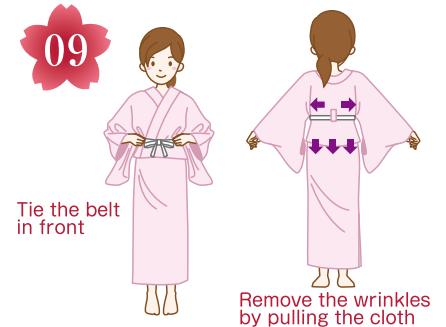

08

8. Cross the belt

Cross the belt and put the string through the belt loop around your back. Neatly pull down the center of the extra fabric underneath the waist.

09

9. Tie the belt

Adjust the neckline to display the top of your collarbone, and tie the belt in front. Remove wrinkles by pulling the cloth to the arrowed directions in the picture, and adjust its shape.

- Fill a bucket with cool water and wash it gently taking care not to scrub.
- If required, stir in a small drop of mild, non-alkaline detergent or baby shampoo.
- Rinse the kimono carefully to remove any suds. After applying a little starch, air dry outdoors on a hanger away from direct sunlight, and then press lightly using an iron.
- Make sure it's completely dry and neat before folding and storing.
